EDITORIAL COMMENT

While there were fewer accounts of club activities with photos posted on Facebook this past month, the void was happily filled by diplomatic postings. This was especially the case with the Maltese Embassy in Washington.

This issue contains two items relating to President Trump's inauguration (pages 4 and 13), another on the presentation of ambassadorial credentials to Mexico's representative in Washington (pages 13-14), and a fourth on the hosting of Young Professionals in Foreign Policy (pages 14-15).

Before we leave Washington, DC I'd like to take note of the appointment of a former resident of Malta as Director of the White House Office of Presidential Personnel (page 17).

Two events which combined club activities and diplomatic appearances were the visit of the H.E. Godfrey C. Xuereb, his wife, and a couple consuls to the Clubs in Dearborn (pages 1, 18-22) and Detroit (pages 23, 28) respectively.

H.E. John J. Aquilina, Malta's ambassador to Brazil, sent me text and photos relating to Cardinal Mario Grech's visit to Brazil and his meeting with local Maltese clergy (pages 9-10). While this event is beyond North American shores, it's important to note that South America has very few residents of Maltese birth or descent, compared to its continental neighbour, and without something like this newsletter our readership might never be aware of this visit.

Three articles relating to what might be called Maltese Canadian organizations are the Kartolini Mill-Kanada project (pages 15-16), the upcoming production of INANNA-Rising Goddess of Malta (pages 7-8), and the monthly luncheon in London, Ontario (pages 11-12).

A tribute to the past is recognized through ticket stubs from two Maltese American organizations in Detroit in 1956 (page 24) and with the photos of the Valentine's dinner and dance held at the Maltese Canadian Club of London in 2016 (pages 24-25).

As an historian, I also like to have something of an "academic" nature in each issue. The short piece on Maltese surnames of Slavic origin is this month's offering (page 6).

If you have ideas to share, wish to be put on the free, bcc electronic mailing lists, would like to learn the newsletter's advertising rates, etc., I may be reached at danbrock62@gmail.com.

A belated Happy Valentine's Day.

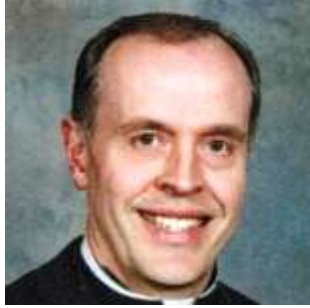

The next big event for the Maltese in North America would appear to be St. Patrick's Day, March 17th.

ST. PAUL THE APOSTLE PARISH, TORONTO, CANADA

From our Pastor's Desk...

Fr. Roy Farrell, a diocesan priest within the Archdiocese of Toronto, is pastor of St. Paul the Apostle Parish, Toronto, the only Maltese parish outside Malta worldwide.

Parish Bulletin for January 11th-12th

This week, I want to talk about the Jubilee Year called by Pope Francis. It's a special time in the Catholic Church, filled with grace and pilgrimage.

The Jubilee Year, which started on Christmas Eve, 2024, is focused on the theme of "Hope". Pope Francis chose this theme to remind us of the significance of hope, especially during difficult times.

What is the Jubilee? The Jubilee is a special holy year in the Catholic Church, traditionally celebrated every 25 years. It is a time for the faithful to make pilgrimages to Rome, seeking spiritual renewal and forgiveness.

This year's Jubilee, however, is unique as it focuses on hope and the need to bring hope to those who are suffering.

Why was it called? Pope Francis called this Jubilee to emphasize the importance of hope in our world today. In his papal bull, Spes Non Confudit (Hope Does Not Disappoint), he invites us to open our hearts to hope and to be a source of hope for others. The Pope's message is clear: hope is not indifferent but requires courage and action. The purpose of this Jubilee is to strengthen our faith, recognize Christ in our midst, and transform us into pilgrims of Christian hope. It is a time for us to reflect on our lives, seek forgiveness, and renew our commitment to living out our faith.

Holy Doors One of the most significant traditions of the Jubilee is the opening of the Holy Doors. The Holy Door at St. Peter's Basilica was opened by Pope Francis on Christmas Eve, symbolizing the beginning of the Jubilee Year. Holy Doors are a powerful symbol of the Church's call to holiness and the opening of our hearts to God's grace.

In our Archdiocese of Toronto, the Holy Door at St. Michael's Cathedral will be opened, inviting all of us to walk through it in a spirit of pilgrimage and renewal.

Plenary Indulgence During the Jubilee Year, the Church grants a plenary indulgence to those who fulfill certain conditions. A plenary indulgence is a remission of the temporal punishment due for sins that have already been forgiven in confession. To receive this indulgence, one must make a pilgrimage to the Holy Door, receive the Sacraments of Penance and the Eucharist, and pray for the intentions of the Pope.

Conclusion As we embark on this Jubilee Year, let us embrace the theme of hope and strive to be beacons of light in our communities. May this special time of grace bring us closer to God and inspire us to live out our faith with renewed vigor and joy.

The Feast of the Baptism of the Lord is a significant event in the Christian liturgical calendar, particularly for Roman Catholics. Celebrated on the Sunday after the Epiphany, it marks the end of the Christmas season and the beginning of Ordinary Time. The feast commemorates the baptism of Jesus Christ by John the Baptist in the River Jordan.

According to the Gospel accounts, this event is notable for several reasons: 1. Divine Revelation: During Jesus' baptism, the heavens opened, and the Holy Spirit descended upon Him in the form of a dove. Additionally, a voice from heaven declared, "This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased." This moment is seen as a powerful revelation of the Holy Trinity: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. 2. The Start of Jesus' Public Ministry: Jesus' baptism signifies the beginning of His public ministry. It marks His anointing by the Holy Spirit and His mission to bring salvation to humanity.

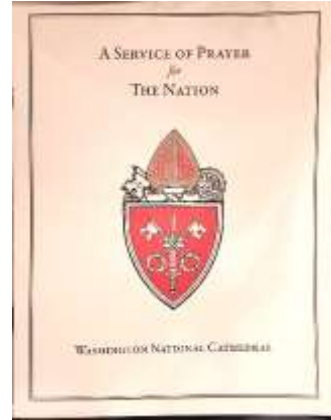

Example for Believers Jesus' baptism serves as an example for Christians. Although Jesus was sinless, His baptism by John, who preached repentance, symbolizes humility and the importance of baptism for believers as a sacrament of initiation and purification.

This feast is a time for Catholics to reflect on their own baptism and its significance in their spiritual journey. The celebration usually includes special prayers and readings during Mass that focus on the themes of baptism, the Holy Spirit, and the manifestation of Jesus as the Son of God. It's a beautiful moment to contemplate the profound mysteries of faith and the divine love revealed through Jesus' life and ministry.

SOME MALTESE SURNAMES OF SLAVIC ORIGIN

Dan Brock

Those of us in Canada, particularly in the Maritimes, are aware of the late Maltese Canadian Charles E. "Charlie" Puglisevich. A successful businessman, he was appointed Honorary Consul for the Maritime Provinces in 1984.

Charles E. Puglisevich,
c. 1988

In Ontario, his grandnephew Niġel Klemenčič-Puglisevich, currently residing in Malta, is also well known within the Maltese Canadian community. Both have been noted in past issues of this newsletter, Charles in the January/February 2019 issue and Niġel in February 2021.

In his herculean tome The Surnames of the Maltese Islands Mario Cassar notes Puglisevich as one of the Italo-Slavonic surnames ending in "...ich" still existing in Malta.

According to Niġel Klemenčič-Puglisevich, his direct ancestor, Andriġa Puljizevič (Andrea Puglisevich) was in Malta by 1814. Andriġa's grandfather, Nikola Puljizevič, was born about 1730, in Zaton Mali, a village 8 km northwest of Dubrovnik, Croatia. (See issue # 23, February 2021, page 5, of this newsletter.)

In Malta, especially in Senglea, the surname Mitrovich is recognized in the patriot and politician Giorgio Mitrovich (1795-1885), a native of Senglea, and his paternal grandfather also named Giorgio Mitrovich, formerly of Kotor, Montenegro, then under Venetian rule, who became a successful Maltese privateer (licensed pirate) when corsairing against Muslim ships was still legal.

Cassar lists Metrovich/Mitrovich as one of the extinct Maltese surnames, along with Covacciosvich, Covich, Evanovich, Flaninich, Ivantovich, Mircovich, Perovich, Verinich, and Vidovich.

In examining the baptismal records, between 1805 and 1825, of the Church of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Senglea, I have found parents with the surnames Mitrovich and Vidovich, as noted by Cassar, as well as the following ending in "...ich": Azecovich, Braicovich/Brajcovich, Crasviatervich, Craviarevich, Deusich, Disepich, Filippovich, Franisvich, Giratovich, Girovich, Hierich, Letich, Medavich, Misinovich, Papich, Papvich, Pavicich, Radolich, Rubinich, Shipovich, Soletich, Stanich, Starvich, Vudovich, and Vitevavich. Of these Braicovich/Brajcovich, Deusich, Disepich, Hierich and Mitrovich are given as the maiden surnames of the mothers.

No doubt an examination of other records for the Parish in Senglea, and beyond the aforementioned dates, will reveal other Slavic surnames. I suspect the surname Montenegro, found in the index of baptisms in Senglea between 1727 and 1749, and noting three different fathers with this surname is also of Slavic origin.

How many other Slavic surnames might be found by examining the sacramental registers of Vittoriosa and Cospicua as well as those for the Greek Orthodox Church in Valletta?

What were the origins of these individuals? What occupations did they pursue? (Andrea Puglisevich was the owner of a cargo vessel known as a polacca.) What became of them? (Most are known to have married Maltese women.) Did they remain in Malta? These may be avenues worth pursuing.

These above-noted Slavic surnames alone should indicate that there is more Slavic DNA in the Maltese population than what academics have heretofore posited, based on the belief that some of the Muslim slaves in Malta were not all Black but were of Slavic origin. The late Godfrey Wettinger had cited the surnames Schiavone and Zarb as such possibilities.

INANNA – RISING GODDESS OF MALTA

Tracy Lamourie

The awe-inspiring historical Pjazza Rjal Teatru in the centre of Malta's beautiful capital city, Valletta, has been chosen as the venue for INANNA – Rising Goddess of Malta, a culturally important, truly epic multimedia, live performance, on July 18th and 19th in 2025, that will thrill locals and visitors alike. "Local audiences have never seen anything like this before."

A year ago, Canada-based Maltese citizen JOanne Camilleri (the star and visionary creator behind the project), a globally renowned belly dancer and instructor at the prestigious University of Toronto whose parents immigrated to Canada from Mellieħa, made an exciting announcement. Thrilling art and theatre lovers across the island nation, she shared her plans to bring her incredible stage show, INANNA - Rising Goddess of Malta, back home to the Maltese Islands. "I am so excited to bring this international Maltese-Canadian multimedia production to my mother country where the story of Inanna began."

JOanne

Camilleri

INANNA - Rising Goddess of Malta is a live 90-minute multi-media, dance, circus, and animation projection with an original musical soundtrack. A mix of folk rock and Islamic scales bring the sounds and performance of the east and west together in this production that celebrates Malta's prehistoric culture and circles around Malta's goddess of fertility story for a contemporary audience. As Camilleri puts it, "It is through the mythos of the goddess of love and fertility in the present, that Malta can embrace a celebration of its history via the performing arts."

"INANNA is an exciting modern multimedia art project based on one of the oldest stories ever told," says Camilleri. "It truly is a nationally important performance about Malta's critical contribution to the development of society and culture." She also points out that the concept of INANNA comes from the Maltese name for Camilleri's Maltese grandmother (in Maltese in-nanna, referring to all her grandmothers since antiquity.

"The story of INANNA is found inscribed on clay tablets and fragments in INANNA's temples that exist today in Malta and her sister island Gozo," says Camilleri who wrote the fascinating script from the ancient myth of the "the descent of INANNA." This epic poem found inscribed in cuneiform on a clay tablet from the early Bronze Age is one of the first stories ever told by the first poet known in history, Edehuanna, the daughter of the Akkadian founder, Sargon the Great and high priestess to the goddess Inanna.

INANNA has already been garnering international attention. Entertainment Monthly in the United States described it as "an epic stage production" in a full feature article they did about the show. In addition to the Entertainment Monthly profile, INANNA - the Rising Goddess of Malta was also featured in the November-December 2022 and January 2023 issues of the newsletter, The Maltese Presence in North America. Camilleri also sat down with the editors at Authority Magazine stateside for a deep dive into her fascinating career for their Live Arts / Theater and Live Performances section.

Camilleri hopes the July 18th and 19th performances will be the first of many future performances on the Islands. "It is my vision to share this story in performance on Malta and Gozo and at the goddess' neolithic temples where Inanna once lived."

This production was also highly endorsed and promoted amongst the Maltese-Canadian community in Canada and the one million Maltese and Gozitan diaspora around the world by the former Consul General of the Republic of Malta to the Commonwealth of Canada, Dr Raymond. C. Xerri.

Xerri says: "This production is not only unique to the Maltese Islands; it's an original artistic masterpiece with enormous potential in a variety of spheres, which not only narrates one of our civilization's oldest stories but has all the elements and hallmark to transcend into a permanent Maltese heritage production - which can be treasured by all Maltese and millions of tourists alike who visit our islands."

Camilleri agrees. "I see this production becoming a national-level performance that will be representative of Malta's ancient history and will celebrate Malta for both locals and for tourists on an annual basis. Effectively our production will contribute to the cultural preservation of history through the performing arts," she adds with passion. "Internationally, the production will educate the world on Malta/Gozo's critical contribution to the development of modern society through the mythos."

INANNA Productions will be auditioning vocalists, musicians and dance performers from the Maltese islands for this live performance.

JOanne Camilleri is available for media interviews about the exciting INANNA project and all aspects of belly dance. Dr Raymond Xerri is also available to the media for interviews about his support for the INANNA project and how important it will be for the Maltese islands.

A million thanks for a wonderful issue once again.

As always, I enjoyed every detail in the newsletter and when it's out, I will give myself the pleasure of going through the photos one by one. And, of course re-read the articles for pleasure. You do an amazing job compiling all that information and fitting it so nicely into a coherent whole. Great indeed! Looking forward to the actual newsletter and the next and next and next and.....

Maria Pia Gauci, Malta

Congratulations on an outstanding effort.

I always enjoy reading your Journal.

John J Aquilina,

Ambassador of the Republic of Malta to Brazil

I would like to congratulate you, for compiling such a great newsletter, full of pictures and different articles, that concern Maltese persons who have made and continue to make our island nation so proud to possess so many talents. The initiative to make the Malta language even more accessible to anyone who wants to learn Maltese is in my opinion a most interesting initiative. With the initiative that you are taking through the newsletter, we can be in the know about the Maltese who are living in Canada/USA. Keep up the good work.

DR IAN BORG REPRESENTS MALTA AT DONALD TRUMP’S INAUGURATION

The Voice of the Maltese

Dr Ian Borg, Malta’s Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Tourism, was only one of just eight top government officials from around the world to be invited to the US Capitol Rotunda in Washington DC for the inauguration of Donald Trump as United States President last Monday.

Others on the exclusive honorary guest list included China’s Vice President Han Zheng (deputising for Chinese President Xi Jinping), Australian Foreign Minister Penny Wong, and Argentine President Javier Milei. Italian Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni was the only other representative from Europe.

Other invitees included Indian foreign minister Subrahmanyam Jaishankar, who represented Prime Minister Narendra Modi, and Ecuador President Daniel Noboa. A notable absentee was UK’s Prime Minister Keir Starmer.

During the inauguration ceremony, Dr Ian Borg, who represented Malta as the country’s foreign minister, also met Marco Rubio, congratulated him on his unanimous confirmation by the Senate as Secretary of State, and told him he was looking forward to working with him and his team.

Minister Ian Borg’s participation in the inauguration signifies Malta’s dedication to nurturing international relationships and cooperation globally and underscores Malta’s standing in the international arena.

Dr Ian Borg, who currently serves as Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Tourism, also served as Chair-in-Office of the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) in 2024.

Dignitaries and diplomats usually attend the inauguration, but it is unusual for heads of state or government leaders to also receive an invitation.

Minister Ian Borg extended his congratulations to Donald Trump on his election as the new President of the United States. He said that Malta looked forward to continuing its close collaboration with the United States of America in the same spirit of friendship and cooperation that has characterised recent years.

The Embassy of Malta to the US had the pleasure of hosting Young Professionals in Foreign Policy during the week of January 26. This event launched YFPF DC's very first flagship programme entitled, "Ambassador Series." The Embassy was honoured to have been selected as the first one to host such an event.

YFPF's event consisted of a fireside chat with Ambassador Godfrey Xuereb whereby the main subject matter revolved around Malta's challenges when it comes to climate change and the initiatives/projects taking place in the country to help combat this. The audience, which was comprised of young professionals and graduates based in DC, was very engaged and avid to learn about Malta's policies and capabilities within this field.

The Embassy thanks YFPF for this opportunity!

NEW PROJECT WANTS TO DIGITIZE
MALTESE-CANADIAN MIGRANTS' MEMORIES

Emma Borg

Toronto's Maltese-Canadian Museum joins forces with Magna Żmien to preserve 'forgotten' stories

The Magna Żmien Foundation and the Maltese-Canadian Museum in Toronto are launching a new initiative to preserve the memories of Maltese migrants.

Through the collaborative project, the foundation encourages the public to digitise and safeguard their personal and family collections of photographs and other analogue media.

The Kartolini Mill-Kanada project aims to save Maltese-Canadian memories from being lost while fostering a deeper appreciation of their legacy.

Magna Żmien is inviting the public to a Sharing Session on Saturday, January 25th, at 11 a.m. at the Valletta Design Cluster, where they will provide updates on the project following the team's visit to Canada late last year.

"The story of Maltese migrants is often forgotten, and these people gave a valid contribution to their host countries," said Andrew Alamango, artistic director of Magna Żmien.

He highlighted how some Maltese Canadians became parliamentary secretaries, worked for Google, and served as key figures in their communities.

Kartolini mill-Kanada's sharing session which will involve a talk and presentation on the project

Alamango emphasised that these stories are more relevant than ever. Noting that after World War II, Maltese migrants moved to host countries like the UK, Australia, and Canada.

"But now, Malta has become a host country for many people. However, we have forgotten that in times of trouble, we migrated. We move because we have to, not because we want to."

During their visit to Canada, the Magna Żmien team toured the Maltese-Canadian Museum in Toronto, a partner in this initiative.

The museum, curated by Richard Cumbo, opened to the public in 2017 and houses thousands of Maltese-related artefacts, ranging from Neolithic figurines to a large exhibit on the "Miss Malta Pageant," organised by the Maltese-Canadian Society of Toronto, which ran from 1967 to 2007.

"In the early 1900s, life for the small Toronto Maltese community was very difficult. Prejudice and discrimination were rampant among the mainly English population. However, with the huge influx of Maltese after World War II, the attitude towards the Maltese (and other minor ethnic groups) changed for the better, and life became easier," Cumbo explained.

The museum operates without funding and relies on volunteers, all of whom are over 75 years old. Despite these challenges, it is enthusiastic about collaborating with Magna Żmien to ensure the continuity of its work.

Cumbo hopes the museum can eventually serve as a digitisation hub but, for now, it will act as a point of contact for Maltese-Canadian families who wish to contribute their photos, videos, or audio. These materials will be digitised either in Malta or at York University in Toronto.

"I feel that it is very important that the Maltese diaspora remains connected in order to better preserve, chronicle, and promote our rich history and culture," said Cumbo.

The project is supported by Arts Council Malta, the Maltese High Commission in Canada, the Maltese-Canadian Museum in Toronto, and York University.

As such, he is in charge of vetting at least 4,000 political appointments, including more than 1,000 positions requiring senate approval.

Sergio Gor with Donald Trump in July 2024, following the failed assassination attempt on the then Republican presidential candidate Sergio Gorokhovsky (aka Gor) is said to have been born in Malta on November 30, 1986, although it has been reported that: “Those who have known him personally say that before immigrating (sic.) from Malta he had been born in the Soviet Union.” In any case, he grew up in Cospicua and immigrated to the United States with his parents at the age of 12 in 1999.

After attending high school in suburban Los Angeles, California, he continued his studies at George Washington University in Washington, DC.

It was also while at university that Sergio got interested in conservative college activism and led the Young America’s Foundation’s chapter on campus. He was recognized as one of YAF’s top student activists in 2007 and in 2008.

It was sometime after this that Sergio anglicized his Russian surname to Gor.

In 2008, Gor was an activist in “Catholics for McCain,” supporting the ultimately unsuccessful presidential bid of former US Republican senator John McCain who was pro-life and committed to nominating judges who were pro-life.

Sergio had held key roles with the Republican National Committee (RNC) and Fox News before working for Republican representatives Randy Forbes, Michele Bachmann, and Steve King. In 2013, Gor became an aide to libertarian conservative Kentucky senator Rand Paul.

On a visit to the Vatican in 2016, Gor met with Pope Francis and was given, “a white skull cap that he had worn on his head.”

In June 2020, Gor left his post as Senator Paul’s deputy chief of staff to serve as chief of staff for the Trump Victory Finance Committee, a joint fundraising committee for President Trump’s re-election campaign and the Republican National Committee.

When Trump left office in January 2021, Gor headed to Florida with him and joined forces with Donald Trump, Jr. to found the conservative publishing house Winning Team Publishing.

In September 2024, the company published Trump’s Save America, the front cover of the book featuring a photo of the Republican presidential candidate bloodied, with fist raised, following the assassination attempt in July.

Gor also fundraised for Trump’s super political action committee (PAC) – a type of organisation that pools and distributes campaign donations – Right for America, which raised more than $72 million for Trump’s election campaign.

As Director of the White House Office of Presidential Personnel, “having a loyalist’s loyalist like Gor at PPO will be key” to weeding out disloyalty to Trump among career Republicans.
